SIGNALS FROM THE COMMODORE

Congratulations to Nick Cassim who won the Kelly Cup in Lolita on 3 May in the postponed Club Championship race. A great race completed a very competitive season with the Tara Ipo Trophy going to Very Tasty (Chris Sligar) and the Brooker Trophy to Ranger (Sean Langman) to complete the Club's top three. The Club Championship was perfect representation of the season with all divisions only finalising their pointscore placings for entry into the event in the last race of their respective series. Thank you to all the yacht owners and crews for delivering a great season on water.

This season was the first for both Chris Sligar as Club Captain and Alice Murphy as Executive Racing Secretary and it has been an excellent season on the water demonstrated by the results above. Thank you Chris and Alice for supporting us in our endeavours and we look forward to the coming season.

On 26 April the Club hosted the 2014 Classic Rally and Concours d'Elegance for the beautiful metre classics.

The postponement of the Club Championship to 3 May, following Easter and Anzac Day back to back and only one weekend before the first Winter Series race, ensured that the free weekend produced another successful working bee for the installation of the first of the two new slipway winches. A major piece of equipment was installed in a weekend and was fully operational first thing on Monday. In addition, flooring and pontoon repairs were completed at the Green Shed — thank you Trevor Cosh and the band of volunteers. I believe this is the second Mother's Day working bee in recent years and my aim is to understand how this occurs with 'competing interests', but not interrogate too much as the working bees are prized occasions. Perhaps I heard Trevor on occasion refer to one of the winches as 'mother'.

The Winter Series is well underway with 23 yachts crossing the line each Saturday for the first two races. Like any Australian ski resort in winter we cannot guarantee snow however the harbour is splendid during the winter with much less traffic and looking pristine in clear blue skies. We can guarantee a great day out so please come down and join the winter fun.

On the evening of 14 May we gathered for a General Meeting and an insightful interview of Syd Fisher OBE by David Salter. A great evening of history and recollections with the ocean racing legend as David recounts in his article in this edition.

Finally this edition is packed with great on-water photography by John Jeremy and I highly recommend the colour version which can be downloaded from the Club's website.

AN EVENING WITH SYD FISCHER

June 2014

Australian yachting has always been dominated by big personalities but those big personalities don't always achieve big things. At the other end of the scale there've also always been a few rather self-effacing people whose achievements have been extraordinary, but are often overlooked. Syd Fischer's contribution to the sport in Australia over the past half-century has been enormous, yet that contribution is rarely recognised. David Salter interviewed him at the SASC's recent General Meeting.

DS: Welcome to the Amateurs, Syd. As a young bloke you played soccer, rugby, boxed and swept a surfboat for North Steyne. A lot of people here tonight will be surprised to learn that sailing was just about the last sport you took up.

SF: I thought it was a stupid sport! The thing that I couldn't get out of my craw was you spend an hour, at least, rigging up a boat, go out sailing, come back, and spend another bloody hour putting it away. Whereas with a surfboat, you just get your four rowers and out you go — ten minutes. That was my view of sailing.

How did you make the move from sweeping a surfboat into sailing?

Well, I got sick of training blokes in the surfboat that got on the piss on the Friday night before the carnival. If they had sunglasses on I'd just lift them up and look at the bloodshot eyes and think, "He'll die halfway to the buoys". You've got to be explosive getting out through the breakers. So anyhow I just looked around for another sport. I tried SASC NEWS water-skiing and didn't think much of that. Then I met a fellow named Bruton who was running Caprice for Bill Northam. They took me out training one Saturday morning and I thought, "Gee, this is all right." So I bought a boat which was on a mooring at the Cruising Yacht Club called Carefree.

So you did a bit of training on Caprice and thought sailing was OK, so you went and bought a boat?

Well, this was a hulk. Been there for years and the anchor chain had rotted through the deck. But being a carpenter I just put it up in Careening Cove, put a new deck on it, caulked it, painted it — looked beautiful! Took it out one day with a bloke called Dick Taylor. It was a bit of a black nor' easter. We went over a few waves, and he looked over the side and said, "You're not going to be happy". The caulking wasn't good.

It's interesting to me that almost every person who's gone on to achieve great things in yachting — and you're certainly in that company — began in centre-boarders. Not you.

No, I skipped that. I don't think it makes much difference to be honest. By then we had Malohi, and I think we did three Hobarts in her and we did pretty well. Then Graham Newland, who won the Hobart race twice in Siandra, and Doug Paterson came to me and said, "You're a competitive person. Why don't we put together a boat for the next Admiral's Cup?" I said, "What's the Admiral's Cup?" I didn't have a clue. So anyhow we did, and that was the first Ragamuffin. She was 49' 6 $\frac{3}{8}$ " long. Quite a big boat in those days. It was the biggest boat in the fleet in Cowes, which meant that, all things being equal, you get out front and don't eat too much gas. That was the start of the Ragamuffins.

I think we should note here that Syd went on to become the real quiet achiever of the Admiral's Cup. He competed an amazing eight times, seven as Captain of the Australian team — an extraordinary achievement. From all those campaigns, what was the highlight?

Oh, I think when we won the Fastnet Race in 1971. No other Australian has done that. We were the only boat that put our spinnakers up. The bigger boats couldn't carry a spinnaker, but that Ragamuffin was a bit of a lead mine, had a fairly heavy keel, and we could hold our kites. We blew every one out by the way, except one, and I wouldn't let them blow that one because I knew we had to get up to the finish.

And what about 1979? How did you find that experience?

Well, we didn't know much about it because we turned the radio off as soon as we'd given any information we had to give. But then someone put it on and there was helicopters taking people off boats and all kind of things. When we finished, people came down at the Royal Ocean Racing Club and said to me "What did you people do?" and I said, "We just put our bloody storm gear up and kept sailing." There were, I think, 300 boats in that race and 16 people died. They didn't have the storm gear we had to have because of the regulations in Australia. We won, and were the only country that got all its three boats in.

Around this time you made one of those huge life decisions and decided to have a tilt at the America's Cup. What on earth convinced you to do that?

Well, we'd sailed against Bondy quite a bit and he'd never beaten us. And I thought, "Christ, if he can do it anyone can!" He didn't know one end of the boat from the other.

Syd Fischer at the SASC

Your first challenger, Advance, designed by Alan Payne, was something of a disappointment.

Well, when I pulled it out of the water in Newport, Dennis Connor came over and looked at it, and said, “Well, if he’s right, everyone else is wrong.” I’ll never forget that.

Not many people know that you share the record for the most number of America’s Cup campaigns — five — with Sir Thomas Lipton. Looking back on all those campaigns, which of them do you think produced the best boat?

It’s hard to say, but maybe Steak & Kidney, the Peter Cole boat. We weren’t doing any good in it upwind, but we were fast downwind. So I thought there mustn’t be anything wrong with the hull, so what’s wrong? So we did what we do to get an inclination rating — put some spinnaker poles out with weights and work it out. We found that the boat was only half as stiff as it should have been, or that Cole thought it was. And I said to Peter Cole at the time, “Peter, how did you calculate it?” He looked at me and he said, “I didn’t calculate it.” So I rang Ken MacAlpine, a naval architect then in Fremantle, and he did the proper calculation for us for stiffness. Then I said to the blokes, the crew, “We’ve got a dud, you’ve got to recognise it, but I think we can make it a lot better. We’ve got eight days between the finish of this round and the next. If everyone’s prepared to work 24/7 I’ll put the money and the effort into doing it.” They said, “Right, let’s go!” so we hired some chainsaws and the grinders had to cut the old keel up and send it

SASC NEWS to the foundry. Anyhow, we put the thing together, got it on the boat, couldn't fair it, but we kept going — and we won races.

Many people believe that at the end of that defender selection series you were the fastest boat.

Yeah, well Connor said that, because he used to train against us. But in their wisdom the West Australians had a straight points system right from Day One. There was no semi-final. So a boat that came good late couldn't make it.

What do you think of the current America's Cup competition?

Expensive. Good luck to Bob Oatley. I sold him his first ocean racing boat. He's going to find it damned hard to beat the load of money that they've got.

After your America's Cup campaigns you got back into offshore racing with what seemed like renewed energy. Were you sick of the round-the-buoys stuff?

Oh, I don't mind the around the buoys stuff but I prefer ocean racing. I think the IRC rule is a stupid rule because there's a bloke in England who buggers it up. It's a 'have-a-guess' rule. But the ORCi is a fully-measured rule and I think it's taking on. You can't hold a world championship under IRC; you can only do it if you've got a fully-measured rating system. I've always said IRC promotes mediocrity.

Syd, you're 87 now — just getting into the prime of life — and doing as much sailing as ever. You campaign a 90-footer in Asia and a 100-footer down here. Aren't you supposed to be slowing up a bit and keeping some money for your kids to inherit?

Well, that's what I always tell them: "This is money you're not going to get". They're all right with that. They can understand — silly old bugger.

We all like to compete — otherwise we wouldn't race against each other — but for 50 years or so you seem to have had an extra-competitive approach to the sport. Do you ever go out and have a sail just for fun?

Not very often, I think the racing is fun. I can't go on deck in heavy weather now because I've lost my balance, so I've got to be very careful. I can't do a night watch and I haven't got the balance to drive. I watch what's going on and if I think the outhaul needs easing or tightening up I don't tell them because my belief is if I have to tell them what to do they shouldn't be on the boat. I just make suggestions.

I think you'd be aware that the sailing community sees you as a bit of a hard head, that you're a tough man, in most senses of the word. Yet person-to-person, you're a pretty nice bloke, even sentimental at times. How do you explain that difference between the way the public sees Syd Fischer, and how you really are?

Well, if I meet an asshole I can be an asshole too. It's as simple as that. When I grew up in the building industry every second word was — you can imagine — otherwise they didn't think you knew what you were talking about. So, you know, it's just the way it is.

OK. Two questions to end with. First: are you going to beat Wild Oats to Hobart this year?

'I'm glad you brought that up' — that's what real estate agents are taught to say when they get asked an awkward question. I think we'll give them a run. We're doing some modifications at the moment that will get a lot more out of the boat.

Last question: Everyone in this room would love to go just that little bit faster. When Jim Hardy was here we asked him for one word that summed up the most important single factor in winning yacht races. He said “preparation”. What’s your key factor?

Well, I think it’s more than just preparation. It’s having a good crew and understanding the crew. The one thing I learned when I was in surfboats is how to handle people to get the best out of them. You’ve only got four blokes and a few minutes. I’d just appeal in a different way to each of them. “Give it to us now”, you know, or to the other bloke I’d say, “If you don’t put more in I’ll take the bloody sweep and shove it down your bloody throat!”

VALE PETER GARROW 1931–2014

Peter Garrow joined the Amateurs in 1975 and remained a member of our Club until his recent passing. His funeral was attended by a number of Amateur's members including five past Commodores.

Peter was on the Board for 14 years and was an Honorary Life Member, former Commodore, and Flag Officer.

Those of us with a memory of things gone by remember his pride and joy Sunchaser, a yawl which was moored off the Club for many years.

Who can forget his arranging of functions at the Club. Some which come to mind are A Night of International Cuisine, a German dining night with SASC beer steins (some are still around), a Gallic French night, a horse race evening, a traditional English dinner (with Vic and Beryl Dibben being crowned King and Queen), a formal evening with lobster for dinner, breakfast on the wharf, a Melbourne Cup Luncheon, etc. etc. He was even a Santa for the kids at their Christmas party. It was all great fun!

Peter was also instrumental in introducing our Friday Twilights.

In his life away from the Club, Peter was married to Kate, also passed away, who supported him during his career with the Amateurs. He worked for Colgate Palmolive for a number of years as a Product Manager across Australia and New Zealand.

Before he took up sailing, Peter was into gliding, so he had an affinity for the wind. Little known to us is that, in October 1967, he achieved what was then an Australian height record of 23,500 feet, staying up for five hours.

We hadn't seen Peter around the Club for a while as he was in poor health.

So the passing of another part of the tapestry of the Amateurs.

SOUTHERLY'S LAST RACE

June 2014

On Sunday 6 April the last race of the splendid Sunday series for the 2013–14 Season was sailed. There were eight starters in the Gaffers Division and eight in Division 6 (the non-spinnaker division). Charles Maclurcan told me that the starting crew enjoy these events greatly, the harbour being uncrowded, and the competitors agree.

Five Rangers took part, their biggest entry ever in a SASC event outside Gaffer's Day. Minutes before the start rain set in and I dived below. The helm of Ranger was subsequently shared by all four crew members. My entire race was spent in the cabin and I revelled in the magnified sounds of a yacht under sail and the talk above about making A1 go faster.

This being my last race in Ranger as skipper the crew insisted that I take her across the finishing line. That task and the delightful post-race gathering at the Club was a great joy to me — I shall always remember it.

SASC SCORES GREAT VETS DAY DOUBLE

Classic yachts on the SASC register took out both divisions of the Great Veterans Race recently staged on Sydney Harbour by the Cruising Yacht Club of Australia.

This year the fleet of Sydney-Hobart veterans was split by the handicapper into two groups: those which had raced under the old IOR rule, and those who'd battled their way to Hobart even longer ago under the original RORC handicapping system.

The IOR Division was won by Nike (Sam Hunt, A25) while the RORC honours and Windward Trophy went to Mister Christian (David Salter, A16). Mr C also won the event last year.

Sailed in a light Southerly and intermittent rain, the race was a substantial test of sailing skill and patience over a course that took many competitors more than three hours to complete.

The winning margins were close. Nike edged out Mercedes IV by only 45 seconds on corrected time, while Mister Christian held off Syonara by just 22 seconds.

Salter admits that his yacht's success this year owed much to the presence on board of Sir James Hardy, who trimmed the main and shared the driving. "We only put any real distance on Syonara during the long, second-last leg to windward", he said.

"It was a joy to watch Jim nurse our boat through the fickle breeze. His touch and concentration at 83 years old are still amazing. On the run we also found time to consume a couple of bottles of his best Brut de Brut bubbly."

SASC yachts featured prominently in the 2014 event. Struen Marie (Tom Fawcett), Maris (Tiare Tomaszewski), Anitra V (Philip Brown) and Lolita (Nick Cassim) all took part, ensuring that the Amateurs connections with the great traditions of the Sydney-Hobart race are maintained.

CLUB CHAMPIONSHIP 2014

Saturday 12 April, the day scheduled for the Club Championship race, dawned with threatening weather and a Gale Warning for Sydney closed waters. Prudently, the Race Officer and the Flag Officers decided to postpone the event, although the conditions actually turned out to be slightly better than expected.

The competition for the prestigious Kelly Cup is an important part of the Club's calendar and the event was rescheduled for Saturday 3 May. Once again the conditions were less than ideal, with a strong and rather gusty westerly wind, but fourteen yachts made it to the start off Shark Island. It was a spectacular start. Two yachts decided that the conditions were not for them and retired but the others completed the course, which was quite long and a test for the crews in a wind which was gusting up to 30 knots.

The Kelly Cup was won by Lolita, sailed by past Commodore Nick Cassim. The Tara Ipo Trophy was won by Very Tasty, sailed by Club Captain Chris Sligar and the Brooker Trophy was won by Ranger, sailed by Sean Langman.

2014 BOB BROWN RACE

The annual Sydney Amateur Sailing Club pre-Easter race from Sydney Harbour to Pittwater was again dominated by vintage yachts. Sailed in glorious sunshine and a brisk southerly of up to 23 knots that saw most of the fleet clear the Heads inside 20 minutes, the 'Bob Brown' was won on handicap by Paper Moon (Denis Williams), a Spencer 32 built in New Zealand back in 1976.

Second, by a margin of four minutes, was last year's winner, the 1965 Swanson 36 Mister Christian (David Salter and Ben Gray), followed six minutes later by Magic (Chris Manion), a Beneteau First 325 launched in 1986. Fourth was another vintage yacht, Reverie (John Barclay), still sailing with its original gaff-cutter rig.

Eleven yachts faced the starters at Clark Island and ten finished. The only retirement was Carabella V (Matthew McCann), a powerful new XP 50. McCann and his crew were well clear in the race for line honours but prudently decided not to risk grounding at low tide on the Pittwater sandbar as they approached the line at Coaster's Retreat.

Paper Moon

The fresh southerly allowed a spanking spinnaker run past the northern beaches, although the rhumbline to Barrenjoey was so square that most boats edged out to sea to improve their angle. Mister Christian, with her long straight keel, was able to hold an inshore track and gybed her spinnaker abeam of the entrance to Broken Bay, in second place behind Carabella V.

However, it wasn't long before the windless 'hole-of-death' behind Barrenjoey claimed Mister Christian. Williams and his crew of Katherine Sainty, Louise Macaulay and Julian Ledger then deftly sailed Paper Moon around the lee of the headland and toward the far shore at Mackerel Beach for a close-hauled leg to the line. Coastal cruising stalwarts Ian and Wendy Anstee performed the radio, finishing and timekeeping duties in their elegant Moody 41 Mystic II.

In previous years the dying breeze inside Pittwater had meant that some of the smaller entrants often failed to make the 2000 time limit, a disappointing end to a 20-mile sail. However, for 2014, the SASC moved the start time to 1300, one hour earlier than the traditional Bob Brown "off", and the entire fleet was able to finish safely in daylight.

The other yachts participating this year, in handicap finishing order, were Classic Blue (Michael Brennan), Molly (Frank Hetheron), Maris (Tiare Tomaszewski), Manu Kai (Peter Robinson), Hagar IV (Rodney Childs) and Shibumi (Paul Thompson and Bryon Moore).

SPECTACLE ISLAND

June 2014

Located on the Parramatta River near Cockatoo Island, Spectacle Island is a depository of historical artefacts of the Royal Australian Navy's history, collected over more than 100 years.

The island is home to more than half-a-million individual items, large and small, which represent every single maritime operation that the Royal Australian Navy has ever been involved in.

Every item stored on the island tells a unique story and collectively the artefacts tell the Royal Australian Navy's story, and the stories of all the men and women who have served the nation at sea.

As the oldest continuously-operating naval facility in Australia, Spectacle Island is a fitting home for the storehouses which keep these items safe for future generations.

The facility first opened in 1884 as the armament depot for the Royal Navy's Australia Squadron. Spectacle Island was transferred to the Commonwealth of Australia following Federation in 1901 and continued as the armament depot when the Commonwealth Naval Forces became the Royal Australian Navy in 1911.

For most of the twentieth century, Spectacle Island continued its armament role until it became the repository for Navy's heritage collection in the 1980s. The island is also the home of the Australian Navy Cadet's Training Ship Sydney.

The importance of preserving Australia's naval history is top of mind for the Director of the Naval Heritage Collection, Commander Alex Hawes.

"Preservation of this collection by people who wear, or have worn, the uniform means that the heart and soul of the Navy is carried forward for future generations.

"Spectacle Island has 48 buildings, spread over five acres, many of which are over 120 years old and all of which are heritage listed.

Spectacle Island

Part of the repository on Spectacle Island

“It is one of the largest collections of its type in the world, and we hope that people will enjoy visiting our public displays where they can see many of the highlights,” Commander Hawes said.

One historical feature which commands attention at Spectacle Island is the large 4.5in Mk 6 gun mounting from the third HMAS Parramatta which was built at the nearby Cockatoo Island.

Other large items include the casings of torpedos and missiles, and radar and communications equipment from yesteryear.

The facility isn't just used for storing artefacts, but also preserving and restoring them. The Assistant Curator at Spectacle Island, Ian Steel, said that a ship's boat from the first HMAS Parramatta, which is more than a hundred years old, is a great example of these efforts.

"The boat has been lovingly restored by a few volunteers and one staff member over the past 24 months," Mr Steel said. "It will be great to see this boat on display in one of the Navy Heritage Collections facilities soon," he said.

The storage facilities at Spectacle Island hold a variety of items such as Navy uniforms dating back to the foundation of the Royal Australian Navy and gifts from foreign ships and dignitaries. The collection even includes the entire Commanding Officer's cabin from the third HMAS Parramatta, exactly as it looked when the ship was decommissioned in 1991.

More unusual items include various swords and arms surrendered to Royal Australian Navy members, and the Night Orders signed by Admiral Nelson on HMS Victory on 20 October 1805 — the night before the Battle of Trafalgar.

While Spectacle Island is not open to the public, due to its role as a collection and storage facility, members of the public can view historical Navy artefacts at the Navy Heritage Centre on Sydney's Garden Island, the Fleet Air Arm Museum at Nowra and the Museum of Cerberus at HMAS Cerberus on Victoria's Mornington Peninsula.
